CEO Named Business Person of the Year

ATLANTA (August 27, 2008)—Jim Cichanski—Founder, President and CEO of Atlanta-based human resources management firm, Flex HR, Inc.—was named “2008 Small Business Person of the Year” by the Greater North Fulton Chamber of Commerce (GNFCC), in a ceremony held yesterday at the Roswell Country Club. The GNFCC chose Cichanski out of seven finalists who were announced last week. The group made the final decision based on the success and growth of Cichanski’s HR company that began with just one employee and based on Cichanski’s creation of additional services to fill requests by the company’s clients.

Cichanski stated as he accepted the award, “I am honored to have been chosen to be your Small Business Person of the Year amongst all of the great members of the Greater North Fulton Chamber. Having clients that care about the compliance of employment law and having the opportunity to provide them with the tools for success is a wonderful thing!”

Cichanski has 30+ years experience in human resources, holding senior level positions in companies that were privately held, pre-IPO, foreign owned, joint venture, Fortune 50, and one labeled the “fastest growing Fortune 1000 in America.” Cichanski established Flex HR, Inc. in 2001; and Inc. Magazine recently named the firm one of the fastest growing private companies in the country.

Flex HR, Inc., a complete human resources department outsourcing firm, assists companies by providing an unparalleled and cost-saving approach to deliver scalable human resources leadership. The company provides a highly collaborative approach to align core human resources competencies to achieve the capital value expected from a company’s human assets. Quickly, Flex HR translates business goals into meaningful human resources objectives and results. Without co-ownership requirements, Flex HR also manages all the backroom HR needs of a client, including managing the payroll, on-boarding and maintenance of the employee through termination, powered by EmployeeUniverse™.
